Top New York WARN Act and Labor Law Lawyer

New York Labor Law Lawyers and NY Long Island Labor Law Lawyers specialize in labor law cases in New York and Long Island, respectively; a NYC Labor Law Lawyer is a specially trained attorney who represents clients with labor law problems.

If you believe that your employer or supervisor is bending or even breaking a labor law, whether he or she is overworking employees, not allowing lunch breaks, or some similar act, you may have a labor law case against your employer. The aptly named WARN Act, or the Worker Adjustment Retraining Notification Act, is a warning and deterrent against employers who abuse their power. The WARN Act ensures that laborers are adequately trained and that their rights as workers are protected. For example, one provision of the Worker Adjustment Retraining Notification Act is that the employer must give the employee sufficient notice before adjusting agreed upon terms or conditions. The WARN Act is just one work law that is often ignored by employers, but a New York labor law lawyer from Employment Lawyer New York will be happy to intervene for your benefit.
